Introducing a new powerhouse in the world of Cloud Solutions and DevOps Technologies

New York, NY: Thaumaturgix, a boutique technology services firm based out of New York, and CloudCover Consultancy, a leading cloud services firm headquartered in Pune, India announced a Joint Venture today to create Tgix CloudCover, a new powerhouse in the world of cloud solutions and DevOps technologies. The combined entity will have a global footprint with offices in New York, Mumbai, Pune and Singapore, and counts several Fortune companies and mid-to-large enterprises in North America, India and the APAC market amongst its clients.

"We've seen demand spike through the roof as enterprises of all sizes across the world have begun embracing the cloud," said Vishal Parpia, Managing Director of CloudCover. "It made perfect sense to tie up with our US partners to extend our global reach allowing us to better serve our multinational client base as they move sensitive workloads and grapple with issues like regulatory compliance, privacy and data sovereignty. Our plans are to expand to several other regions over the next 24 months."

Tgix CloudCover has accumulated an impressive amount of experience and expertise with multiple cloud providers including AWS, Microsoft Azure, and Google Cloud Platform. The entity has tie-ups with several other leading technology vendors in the cloud ecosystem. Moses Merchant, EVP of Thaumaturgix, feels that new areas of focus will be in containerization architectures, serverless computing, and DevOps automation. "There's a very large backlog of workloads that we are helping migrate to the cloud," said Mr. Merchant, "but clients that are already well established in the cloud want to stretch the boundaries and re-factor their applications to employ micro-services architectures and containerization technologies, and a lot more automation. This is a natural progression if you want to remain relevant and competitive." The company aims to carve a niche in these areas, and is also looking to develop their own products and IP for supporting an international clientele.
